The portfolio NINE (2008), is the artist's ultimate choice of her project to create a series of monochrome compositions of straight horizontals and verticals, based on colour related words.

Nine works have been chosen out of a series of 208 different compositions which were the result of her project "Checker Alphabet"(2006) To originate these compositions the artist developed a system of formal rules to convert colour related words (lemon, olive, emerald) into a pattern of horizontals and verticals.

Annesas Appel has chosen eight basic colour groups, blue, brown, yellow, gray, green, orange, purple and red, as a starting point of her project. Within each colour group an A-Z of 26 colour related words have been compiled, each starting with a different letter of the alphabet. Through a specific counting system the individual letters that up words, are converted to numbers, based on mathematic premises.

These numbers are applied to an x- and y- axial system. The colour of the resulting checker pattern evolves from the colour of the word that is being used. (for example the red of a tomato) Each pattern is being named after the initial letter of the word involved. The total result is a collection of 208 unique works.
